ACCIDENT CAUSES DEATH

SON OF FORMER TOWNSMAN LOSES HIS LIFE AT TORONTO.

Harry Armstrong, aged 24, a young electrical engineering student, employed by the Canadian General Electric Company, met his death in the transformer room of the Lansdowne plant, Toronto, at 3.05 o'clock Saturday morning. The exact cause of death is unknown, although it is thought that the young man had been on the ladder a little while before his death. When Dr. C. N. Mooney, of 1893 Davenport road was summoned he pronounced him dead and notified Chief Coroner G. W. Graham, who ordered the body sent to the morgue, where an examination was made. The victim of the accident received a fractured skull, but it is not known whether death was primarily caused by electric shock. Officials of the company state that they did not think there would be enough current to cause electrocution. Assistant Foreman H. Cowie said that Armstrong had evidently fallen off the stairs and fractured his skull. "As far as can be gathered he was only three or four feet from the floor when he fell," said Mr. Cowie. "Nobody is in a position to say how the accident occurred." Armstrong, who had taken an engineering course at the University of Manitoba, had only another month of practical experience to put in with the General Electric Company before he was through. He had been with the company for 13 months at Peterboro, and had gone to Toronto about seven weeks ago. His home is in Carman, Manitoba. Mr. Armstrong is a son of Mr. Hamilton Armstrong, formerly of Napanee.

WILTON.

"Our Awful Aunt," a comic drama, in two acts, was presented by the Wilton Young People's Society, in the Methodist hall, Wilton, on Friday evening, April 13th. The cast of characters were as follows: Aunt Matilda, Gladys Wallace ; Mrs. Hazelton, Dorothy Neilson ; Alice Hazelton, Aleta Babcock ; Frank, Alec Brothers, Gordon Clark ; Carrie Benton, Frank's fiancee, Marjorie Storms ; Pete, colored servant, Robert Asselstine ; Waggles, Allan Gillian. James Bannon, Dave, Wallace's accomplice, Clinton Babcock ; policemen, Keith Simmons and G. Snyder. The play had plenty of humor and a good moral.

Before the play the Y.P.S. choir sang "Consecration," followed by selections by the Wilton male quartette ; violin solos by Dorothy Neilson and readings by Pearl Frink. The Y.P.S. quartette, consisting of Dorothy Neilson, Marjorie Storms, Robert Asselstine and James Bains, rendered "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" with fine effect, and responded to an encore with "Down by the Riverside." Miss Storms and Marjorie sang the "Lovers' Quarrel" as a duet, and Earl Cole and Adrian Babcock as Mr. and Mrs. Jiff, sang two splendid songs, Adrian taking the part of Mrs. Cole, Jr.

ALL LONDON EXCITED

Wedding of Duke of York Will Be Gala Fete.

No Such Elaborate Preparations Have Been Made Since the Marriage of King George—There will be a Week of Festival With Thursday's Ceremony as the Climax.

LONDON, April 23.—Not since the day thirty years ago, when King George V., as the Duke of York, led his royal bride to the altar, has Great Britain prepared herself for such a gala wedding fete as will be celebrated on Thursday next, when Prince Albert, Duke of York, weds Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon in Westminster Abbey.

All plans for the great occasion are completed and it only remains to put the finishing touches to the scenery for staging this royal pageant, for which the world, thrilled by the romance of the young prince's wooing of a subject of his own land, has been eagerly waiting.

London herself will be decked like a bride in all the finery of her silken flags and banners, and everybody in the United Kingdom—well, almost everybody, so it seems—will be here to catch a glimpse of the handsome bride and gallant lover and lend a hand in the festivities which will be held everywhere Thursday night. Those unfortunate enough not to be able to come to London will be regaled with the wedding story told by wireless broadcasting.

Hundreds of thousands of people are expected to line the route of the wedding procession to and from the Abbey, and, in addition to the stands erected near Westminster for spectators, every building past which the Duke and his bride will drive will be turned into a box and pavilion for their enthusiastic well-wishers. The windows of offices, shops and even private houses, have already been rented to persons who have come from all parts of Great Britain and from beyond the seas.

Already some places of vantage are bringing big prices. One South American financier paid 100 guineas for two windows in Parliament Street. But, in all this rush for seats, these unfortunates who returned from the Great War grievously wounded have not been forgotten. A stand accommodating 600 of them has been constructed on the line of the procession near the Horse Guards.

To handle the enormous assemblage in the streets police will be on duty 7,500 foot police, 200 mounted men and 1,000 specials. Traffic along the streets during the procession will be suspended for some time before the carriages appear.

The ceremony in the Abbey will last three-quarters of an hour. In the nave of the Abbey 600 privileged guests will see the ceremony of a lifetime from tiers of seats specially built, and 2,000 other guests will be placed in the nave and transepts.

The wedding will furnish a great occasion for the famous Abbey bellringers, who will play a peal of Stedman's Triples, consisting of some five thousand changes, which was first taught to their predecessors about the year 1666.

The bridal couple will proceed to Buckingham Palace after the ceremony, and late in the afternoon will leave by train for the first stage of their honeymoon in Surrey. Throughout the first part of the week the Duke and his bride will be kept busy preparing for the great event.

Various receptions have been arranged at Buckingham Palace, at which the guests will be privileged to see the wedding presents.

Public interest in the wedding is daily becoming more intense and every detail is eagerly read.

The week will be filled with festivities for London. It is the ambition of the London Association to provide more and more novel entertainments every day than any city in the world ever had before. The decorations in the streets will be tasteful and gay. Big and little stores are co-operating in the decorating as, perhaps, never did before, and arranging to give a novel, interesting entertainment, musical and otherwise free. Every hotel and restaurant in the west end is preparing for special entertainments, and evening gala dances will be in order.

Drug Cases Are "Frame-Ups."

MONTREAL, April 23.—The practice of the Federal police of awarding half the fine imposed on drug dealers to the informer who enabled them to make the case, was on Friday declared by an absolutely immoral by Judge Monet in the police court.

"The system of giving half the fine to the informers is wrong," said the judge, "and encouraged unprincipled people to 'frame' cases against innocent members of society. Hereafter I will use my own discretion in awarding the money to the informers. If I have the least reason to think that any of them have given the information solely for the financial benefit they may receive, I will not award them one cent."

Owen Sound Man Suicides.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., April 23.—Gillin Currie, a life-long resident of Sydenham Township, was found Saturday night in the cellar of his home with his throat cut. It was undoubtedly a case of suicide. In the early evening he left his wife at the barn saying he would go to the house. On his return he could not be found and Mrs. Currie got the assistance of her brother and the body was found in a corner of the cellar. Deceased had suffered from a nervous breakdown for some time. He leaves a wife but no children.

Appeal of Attorney-General in his action against the Wholesale Grocers' Association and others is dismissed, the learned judges holding varying opinions as to his powers in such a case.

One hundred years ago two brothers, Elijah and Jacob Huffman, and a cousin, Peter Huffman, came to this locality as its first settlers. They were descendants of sturdy U. E. Loyalist stock and by hard work patience and industry, transformed the then wilderness into one of the finest farming sections to be found in the county of Camden and Moscow was known for years as the "Huffman settlement." The descendants of those early pioneers occupy sixteen farms in and around Moscow, and are among the foremost citizens, worthily maintaining their family traditions. An interesting history of the Huffman family, dating back 200 years, written by Estelle May A. M. Bogart, of Napanee, is just off the press. The book is well written with numerous illustrations, and does credit to its author. Arrangements are underway to fittingly celebrate this coming summer the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival of Moscow's first settlers.

WHAT DO WE BURN WHEN WE BURN OUR TREES ?

What do we burn when we burn our trees ?
We burn the home for you and me.
We burn the carriage-house, barn and shed,
The baby's cradle, the little boy's sled,
The bookcase, the table, the rocker of ease,
We burn all these when we burn our trees.

What do we do when we burn our trees ?
The homes of birds, and squirrels and bees,
The homes of the brook and the cooling spring
Where violets blossom and blue-birds sing.
The beauties of nature, 'so fair to please—
We burn all these when we burn our trees.

Summer or Winter, day or night,
The woods are an ever-new delight ;
They give us peace, and they make us strong
Such wonderful balms to them belong.

THE REDISTRIBUTION FIASCO.

The redistribution drama at the Legislature has had a happy ending for a majority of the members. The Conservatives know that they brought the Government to its knees. The Government is spared the invidious task of changing the constituencies of seats which suits its supporters very well, and it can throw the blame on the Conservatives. The Liberals can point out that they offered to remain all summer to aid in putting redistribution through. Every group has a talking point for the campaign.

The result is satisfactory to Government and Conservative strategists. Probably no complaint will be heard from members who sit for the 22 constituencies with less than 45,000 population in each. But there are 25 or 26 constituencies containing more than 50,000 each. Numerically the divisions run all the way from 11,000 to 111,000. Nobody has defended these inequalities. The question has been discussed during the whole life of the Legislature, and the case for a redistribution before the next election has been admitted by all parties. The Government pleaded that it had to wait for the Federal census period of 1921, but these have been available since the beginning of the session. No valid excuse for delaying action has been proposals has been furnished. The Premier professes that there would have been plenty of time but for the episode which compelled him to decide for dissolution early in May. Is he certain that a June election was far from a foregone conclusion before Mr. Hicks threw his little bomb ?

It was noticeable that there was no applause when the Government or the Conservative benches when Mr. Hay announced the willingness of the Liberals to sit all summer. It would not have been necessary to stay until the dog days to pass a redistribution measure if the majority wanted one. All the Government had made up its mind to a June election, and the Conservatives had reason to believe that they would take redistribution out of the hands of the present Legislature in the hope that they could remould it nearer to their hearts' desire in a new House. In consequence the representation of parties in the next Legislature, as in the present one, will bear no strict relation to the popular vote.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

Council Chamber,
April 17th, 1923.

A special meeting of the Council for the transaction of general business was held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday night, April 17th.

The full board was present—Reeve Hambly, Councillors Burgess, Harington, Huffman, Perry, Paul and Tustin.

Mayor MacGregor presided.

A communication was received from the Law Construction Co., confirming a report of a drop in the price of liquid asphalt, and changing the charge per gallon in the agreement from 15c. to 14c.

Mrs. Robt. Smith and Mrs. Allen, representing the Woman's Institute, addressed the Council in the matter of placing containers at certain corners in the town in which to throw waste paper, instead of throwing it on the street. The Woman's Institute, they intimated, were willing to furnish those containers if the Council would undertake to place them and see that they were looked after. The Mayor promised the ladies that the matter would be taken up later on in the Council.

From Heaton's Agency, enclosing suggestion for a page advertisement in Heaton's Annual. Referred to Printing and By-laws Committee to report.

A page advertisement setting forth the advantages the town affords to manufacturers would cost $150.00. This ad. would appear in three different booklets, size of page 4 x 6.

From the Dominion Canners, with the information that it was too late to make arrangements for the operation of the Napanee factory this year. Preparation would have to be made several months in advance of the present time, such as making contracts with growers, contracting for seeds, cans and numerous other equipment. Referred to the Finance Committee to take such action as they may deem advisable.

From the Bell Telephone Co., asking Council to make a new contract for maintaining the fire alarm system. No action taken.

On a request from the Daughters of the Empire, that body was refunded the sum of $9.00 charged for the use of the Town Hall.

Mr. Winter, seed merchant, personally appealed to the Council for leniency under the Transient Traders' By-law. He has but lately engaged in business in Napanee, and asserted the Council he intended to become a permanent resident of the town.

It was moved and seconded that $50.00 be charged, was lost, and an amendment placing the tax at $100.00 was carried, the amount to revert back to him in his business tax.

Tenders were opened for the market tolls and stock yard sales as follows: G. H. Lapum $280.00, Chas. Garrison $301.00, and Wm. Light $275.00. Referred to Market and Police Committee to report to the Mayor their recommendation before next meeting of the Council.

The Chairman of Finance reported unpaid taxes to the amount of $4284.06.

On motion the Auditors' Report was accepted and filed; also that the Auditors be paid for their services.

The Chairman of Streets recommended negotiating with the Ontario Government for the stone stored on the town property. The town could use it and have it crushed for the streets, instead of operating the quarry. Also that tenders be asked for teaming. Report adopted.

A By-law was passed, licensing liveries and owners of vehicles for hire. This by-law amends the by-law passed in 1917. The tax schedule is as follows: 1 car $15.00, each additional car $500; 1 horse $5.00, team $10.00, for more than 2 horses $15.00.

Moved by Coun. Burgess, seconded by Coun. Hartman, that the former motion to consider in committee advertising in Heaton's publications be rescinded, and that the matter be taken up now and settled. Lost.

On motion the Town Property Committee was instructed to report on the question of paper containers as to number, location and price.

The following report was submitted to the Council of the town's expenditure from January 1st to date, and the expenditure for the corresponding date last year.

WOMEN EXPLORERS.

Two of Them Took During Trip Into Canadian Arctic.

A fascinating volume could be written round the exploits of women explorers.

It is not long since Miss Mary Hall returned to London after one of the most extraordinary journeys ever undertaken by man or woman. Starting at Chinde, in Portuguese East Africa, she crossed the continent to Cairo. Thirty negroes were her only companions.

She travelled where no white woman and only two white men had ever been before. Night after night she fell asleep to the roaring of lions, and many times looked death in the face.

Not long ago Rosita Forbes, now Mrs. McGrath, journeyed into the African desert accompanied only by a few Asiatics, and reached Kufara, a spot hidden in the sands, and of which no white man had ever brought back any description or record. The journey meant endless days of travel on very small rations and scarcely any water.

A wonderful journey was that made by Miss Charlotte Mansfield, who traveled 17,000 miles from the Cape to Cairo. Thousands of miles were covered on foot or in a hammock slung on a pole carried by natives.

Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard journeyed across the wilds of unexplored Labrador, accompanied by three native guides and a young Eskimo boy. This "little lady," as she is described, "slender, graceful, and refined," had to brave many terrible hardships.

Mrs. Theodore Bent, a delicate Irishwoman, has explored districts in Persia which no other white person has ever seen. In her wanderings she has narrowly escaped death many times from a wide range of dangers, from pirates and fanatical natives to wild beasts and avalanches.

There are few men who would care to undertake the journey made by Miss Dessa Cameron, from Chicago to the Arctic regions. She covered 10,000 miles on foot, horseback, and in bullock wagons, much of it through country no other white woman had ever visited.

Women have proved that they can face danger and hardships with amazing courage. Mrs. Bullock-Workman has scaled Himalayan peaks, while Mrs. Alan Gardner has shot tigers in the East.

Mrs. Mulhall, who has explored vast regions between the Amazon and the Andes, was the first white woman to set eyes on the Albert Nyanza.

ALL FIELD SEEDS TO BE OFFICIALLY GRADED

The Seed Control Act, administered by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, is undergoing amendment at the present session of Parliament. The amending Bill, after receiving the approval of the Agricultural Committee, has had its second reading in the House of Commons. The original Act provides for the compulsory grading, only of timothy, alsike, red clover, and alfalfa. The grades of these seeds recognized are "Extra No. 1," "No. 1," "No. 2," "No. 3," and "Rejected." The amended act will extend compulsory grading to all kinds of grass and clover seed, flax, sorghum, millet, wheat, oats, barley, rye, corn, buckwheat, sunflower, field peas, field beans, and vetches. Provision is made for including seeds of other kinds of farm crops. The Bill also provides for the optional grading for commerce of field roots and garden vegetable seeds. Farmers selling seed on their own premises will not be required to grade seed grain, grass seed and clover seed, however, sold from the farm must have been officially tested and graded on the basis of a control sample.

An Old Dispute.

Negotiations which have been going on for fifteen years between the Canadian and Newfoundland Governments with a view to solving the Labrador boundary difficulty may, it appears, reach their conclusion this year, and if they do the bleak territory of Labrador, on the extreme northeast coast of Canada, the southern portion of which abuts on the province of Quebec, is likely to become Canadian soil. The latest proposal is said to be that Canada assume the Newfoundland national debt of $50,000,000 and take title to Labrador before the Privy Council in London, the final court of appeal in the British Empire, but, of course, should a prior agreement be reached, this friendly litigation would be dropped. Of late years the Labrador question has assumed added importance because of the natural resources in the shape of minerals, timber, and waters in the territory.

Protestant Schools.

Protestant school enrollment in Montreal will show a material decrease when the figures for the current half year are completed, it is declared by officials of the board. The drop is almost entirely in the kindergarten and first grade, and is said to be a reflection of the drop in the birth-rate during the second and succeeding years of the war.

For Salvation Bands.

Nearly 1,000 band instruments of all kinds are made, and a similar number repaired, at the Salvation Army's factory at St. Albans, England, where nearly all the work is done by hand.

Here and There

Nova Scotia has adopted the "drive to the right" rule of the road, the bill providing the change having received the assent of the administrator of the province.

The year 1922 was a banner year for Montreal in the number and tonnage of ships which came to the port, a total of 3,983 ships of 13,069,699 tons arriving, as compared with 5,541 ships of 9,725,450 tons in 1921.

Canada led the world in 1922 in the export of raw furs to the United States. The total fur catch for that year was over 4,000,000 pelts, valued at $16,000,000. While the general price of furs shows a downward trend, the total catch shows a remarkable increase.

Four of the Canadian Pacific "Empress" liners, the Britain, the France, the Scotland and the India, are to load grain at Quebec during the 1923 season, and new berths have been provided for these vessels near the grain conveyors, at a cost of $300,000.

When she was alighting from a street car in Vancouver, Mrs. Rose McLaren received injuries which prevented her from concentrating and temporarily did away with her earning power as a spiritualist or psychic reader. She was awarded $1,250 against the railway company.

The addition of the 17,000-ton "Montaurier" to the Canadian Pacific "Mono Class" fleet marks an important development. Not only is she the largest one-class-cabin ship sailing to and from Canadian ports, but she is the largest in her class on the Atlantic. Her length is 613 feet and breadth 68 feet. Because of her size she will sail to and from Quebec.

Approximately 8,000 tons of silver ore are waiting shipment from the Keno Hill, Yukon, mines. This quantity represents the winter haul. Another 2,000 tons may be moved this summer, making the total silver shipments ten thousand tons for 1923. Such an output is worth about $2,000,000, high grade ore running from $200 to $300 per ton.

"The greatest feat of steam transportation to my knowledge," said C. E. Stockdill, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, recently, "was the movement of the grain crop of 1922." From Sept. 1 to Nov. 31, a period of 91 days, the Canadian Pacific Railway loaded and shipped an average of 4,265 cars per day. This requiring the dispatching of a train every 45 minutes during that entire period, carrying more than 100,000 bushels daily. This movement exceeded even that of the bumper crop year of 1915.

One of the many instances of the splendid work carried out at the Liverpool docks is afforded by the Canadian Pacific liner "Metagama." On a recent arrival at that port she started the discharge of her cargo and coaling at 6 o'clock in the morning. Allowing for the usual dinner hour, she took on board in her side bunkers 1,000 tons of coal, which was completed by 2.45 the same afternoon. At the same time she discharged 1,700 tons of cargo, the greater part of which consisted of package freight, completing this operation by 7.15 the same evening.

"I Told You So."

When a member of Parliament "ascends" from the House of Commons to become the holder of a legal office, he is supposed to cast off all his political predilections, and to the credit of Canadian jurists be it said it is nearly always the case, in striking contrast to our friends across the line, where the judiciary and politics are closely intermingled. But it is only human nature to suppose that when the progress of events justifies the predictions made by the politician the jurist will, inwardly at least, say to himself, "I told them so."

Such must have often been the train of thought of George Oscar Alcorn, K.C., now Master-in-Ordinary at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, for when he was M.P. for Prince Edward in the session when the Grand Trunk Pacific deal was being pushed through by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in face of a stern opposition from Mr. Borden and the Conservative party, Mr. Alcorn was one of the chief assailants of the Hazen-Crothers-Laurier compact, and predicted almost exactly the financial stress which the deal would bring upon the Dominion. On one occasion he spoke for the greater part of a day in protest against the legislation, and warned Laurier that he was bringing a strain upon the Treasury which would burden the country for years to come.

A recent re-reading of that speech in Hansard gives one an idea of Mr. Alcorn's foresight and causes wonderment that so clear an arraignment of the G. T. P. project did not serve to stop that fatal policy, the source of all Canada's present-day railway troubles.

New Horned Dinosaur.

Mr. Charles W. Gilmore, Associated Curator of the United States National Museum, describes a new horned dinosaur from Canada, known to science as the Styracosaurus albertensis. This ancient animal had a skull six feet long which fairly bristled with horns. Dr. Gilmore compares the skull of the Styracosaurus with that of a horned toad, showing a very striking similarity, except that the latter is only an inch long. Were the horned toad enlarged seventy-two times to the size of its ancient cousin, its appearance would be even more bizarre than that of the dinosaur. One of the most interesting of aquarian specimens is the little seahorse whose habits differ materially from those of other fish. The seahorse may be called the "kangaroo" of the sea, for it carries its young about in a kangaroo-like pouch. Strangely enough it is the male that carries the baby seahorses and shelters them until they are old enough to take care of themselves. When the father sea-horse has arrived at the conclusion that the young must fare for themselves, he sends them out into the world by scraping his pouch against a rock or shell.

Politely Correct.

"Father, there is a debt-collector waiting at the door." "All right. Tell him I'm out." "Out of what?" "Out of funds."

Widow's Son Climbs High

In the university of hard knocks, the greatest leaders of thought and action have been educated. With our present generous tendency toward mothers' pensions and social welfare agencies, will we be able to develop, public men of the mental stature of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, George Brown, and our present Minister of Finance, Hon. W. S. Fielding?

Every thoughtful man and woman will admit that the burden rests heavily on a widow who is left without means, but with a family of young children to be provided for, it was in order that such a mother might be relieved of her dual burden that humane citizens never rested until the state provided mothers' pensions. But how are the children of these mothers affected by the paternal attitude of the Government? Will they develop the initiative, resourcefulness and sense of responsibility usually so evident in the boy who helped to lighten the load of his widowed mother? Scanning the list of successful men and women one knows, not only the more mature, but those in their thirties, who give promise of reaching the top of the ladder—one is impressed by the big percentage who had to hustle in their childhood.

Hon. Mr. Fielding provides unassailable proof of the value of having to share the responsibilities of a widowed mother. He did not attend school after he reached the mature age of ten years, yet he is a match for the aristocratic and linguistically expert diplomats of the European nations.

Mr. Fielding was born in Halifax in November, 1848, almost seventy-five years ago. His father was an Englishman who had joined the ranks of the British army and who finished his service in Halifax, where he married. When our Finance Minister was ten years old his father died. The boy had to leave school and help his mother with the support of the family. His first venture was as a "newsie." Then he secured a job as a printer's devil in the newspaper plant owned by the late Hon. Joseph Howe. As a boy of sixteen he became connected with the Morning Chronicle in a reportorial capacity. In a few years he had risen to the position of managing editor, which he retained until 1884, when he retired on account of assuming the highest position within the gift of his province.

In 1882, Mr. Fielding had been elected to the Assembly of Nova Scotia. The victory of the Liberal party was wholly unexpected, and the men elected were without experience in practical politics. The Conservative opposition included some of the outstanding public men of that period. Many were the traps laid for the green Government. Mr. Fielding, who had entered the Pipes administration without portfolio, was always the bright young chap who kicked the traps out of the road before they could be sprung. By sheer ability and concentration upon the task in hand—he took the actual leadership of the Government. This had been going on for some time, when Premier Pipes called his supporters around him one day and told them that the farce had to cease, that Mr. Fielding must assume the premiership.

Mr. Pipes resigned and recommended Mr. Fielding as his successor in office. He was only thirty-six years of age at that time, and he was Premier of his native province until 1896, when he resigned and went to the House of Commons as Minister of Finance in the Laurier administration. He held that important post during the period of Canada's greatest material development, until 1911, when he first tasted of the cup of defeat.

It will be recalled that Mr. Fielding refused to follow Sir Wilfrid Laurier in opposing conscription. His own son, Lieut. Henry Fielding, served overseas with the forces. Mr. Fielding had been elected by acclamation in 1917, and continued to support every effort directed at winning the war.

His integrity is beyond question—and he will fight for what he believes to be right until the last dog is hung. But his devotion to principle has cost him dearly; it cost him the office of Prime Minister. He was the man whom all Canada knew should be honored with the leadership of the Liberal party after the death of Laurier. Because of his stand on conscription and for that reason alone, he was rejected. Quebec would have none of him, and supported Mackenzie King instead.

The Little Grey Man—as he is affectionately called by those who frequent the House of Commons—is more than a match for the smart young men who are his fellow-members. Possessed of the ability to marshal his arguments in most effective manner, logical and convincing, Mr. Fielding is master of debate. When he has been the target of the Opposition's criticism, it is thrilling to witness him launch his broadside. He can alter the position of the forces within a few minutes, and put the most capable critic on the defensive. He is such a bonny fighter that this quality of itself would insure the admiration of the House.

It is a remarkable record—nearly half a century in the public service, and still ably bearing the heaviest burden. He is a leaven for the younger men. It is fortunate they have him to respect and emulate.

The little ten-year-old boy who had to leave school and sell newspapers in Halifax has received numerous degrees. Among the universities which have honored him are McGill, Acadia, Queen's and Dalhousie.

Application to the task in hand brought him into the very front rank of Canadian statesmen, and now in his seventy-fifth year, he would treat with scorn any suggestion that he should observe a ten or twelve-hour day.

Wood Rails.

Rails of wood, instead of steel, are in use on several railways in this country. One of these railways, in the province of Quebec, is thirty miles long, and is used for transporting timber.

PROPOSED NEW BASILICA STE. ANNE DE BEAUPRE

THE PROPOSED NEW BASILICA AT STE. ANNE DE BEAUPRE. INSERT IS THE OLD BASILICA PRIOR TO THE CONFLAGRATION.

WHEN the historic Shrine and Basilica at Ste. Anne de Beaupre was burned to the ground last year, together with the monastery and the novitiate of the Redemptorist Fathers, the clergy did not waste any more time than was necessary in lamenting their loss, but set about at once to construct a temporary shrine and to lay plans for a larger and newer church. After a great deal of discussion it was decided that the old church had become too small for the demands and that the exigencies called for greater accommodation. It was therefore decided to demolish the old walls, and to build a church proportionate to the needs of the future as far as they can be foreseen. The plans of the magnificent structure shown above were decided upon.

The new Basilica which has been designed to give the edifice an appearance compatible with its use will not conform to the architectural style of any one period but will be a combination of Roman and Gothic. An idea as to its generous proportions can be gained from the following figures: Length over all 312 feet; Interior length, 260 feet; length of choir, 65 feet; width of nave, 134 feet; width of transept, 186 feet; height of grand nave, 85 feet; superficial area 42,000, square feet. There will be twenty-six altars, twelve of which will be in the crypt Chapels, and the lighting of the interior will play a large part in the scheme of decoration of the church and will be a telling factor in providing a beautiful place for the hundreds of thousands of pilgrims who journey each year to the famous shrine.

Eskimos Eat Their Boots.

Why do Eskimos, who spend most of their lives battling against elements far more rigorous than we could ever imagine, never suffer from colds?

The fact is that the Eskimo believes in having plenty of fresh air about his body, and makes a point of wearing the loosest garments imaginable and no tight-fitting underclothing.

Authorities declare that it is because Eskimos allow fresh air to circulate continually all over the body that they are the hardiest race in the world. As babies they go unclothed, being carried about in the hoods of their mothers' furs.

The Eskimos' feet receive great care, and the women are credited with making the only absolutely waterproof boot in existence. It is made of sealskin, without the fur, "tanned" and kept pliable by chewing. The parts are then sewn together with deer sinews, in a "lockstitch" which no other race seems to understand.

Within this boot of "chewed" sealskin a deerskin sock is worn, the hair being next to the skin. Sock and boot come off together, and every night they are dried on a framework rigged above an igloo oil lamp, and the lamp is kept burning day and night for this purpose and for the melting of snow for drinking water. In the morning the first duty of the women is to "chew the boots" of the men.

Owing to the pure cold air they breathe, and to the constant exercise which gums and jaw get in chewing blubber, sealskin, and so on, Eskimos have very strong teeth. Such a thing as a cavity or any form of toothache is unknown.

The Eskimo is healthy also because he drinks a large amount of snow-water. Indeed, his ability to melted snow as a beverage keeps his wife busy melting snow or filling pails from holes in the ice.

Mummy's Paint.

Mummies have their uses, especially those of between 2,000 and 3,000 years of age, for some of the richest and finest of brown paints is manufactured from these old mummies.

The paint is made by grinding the bones of the mummies with the bitumen with which they were embalmed. Each mummy, when ground up, makes sufficient paint to last for about five years. Besides its wonderful rich color, it has the advantage of being practically permanent, and for these reasons it is in great demand amongst artists, especially portrait painters whose subjects have brown hairs.

Unfortunately, the supply of suitable mummies is getting scarce, for it is only those of between 2,000 to 3,000 years of age that will produce the beautiful brown paint so loved by artists. It was during that period that the art of embalming was at its zenith.

After the embalming process had been carried out, the body was coated with bitumen, and subjected to a slight heat. It is this warmth, in combination with the great age of the bitumen, that has produced the wonderful brown tint which makes the paint produced from it the finest in the world.

Tired of Making Money.

"I left Ford, when I was 45, because I got tired of making so much money. It became a burden. It was almost obnoxious, distasteful. I had no particular use for so many millions.

"So I stepped from under this avalanche of money—and I'm heartily glad I did, for I have found more genuine satisfaction in striving to serve my fellow-citizens than can be derived from ordinary business activities."

This extraordinary, self-revealing statement was made to me by James Couzens, the ex-Canadian "newsie" who became chief partner with Ford, and who partner by receiving $2,500 and who sold out to Ford for $20,000,000 in 1915.

Who is he?

Who is the man in the private office?

He is—the man your salesmen are afraid to stop on the street;

—the man who is always "out" or "busy" when they call;

—the man who ignores your telegrams.

Somebody has called him on Long Distance. He does not know yet who it is, but he is as polite as if he anticipated favors!

The Helping Hand.

Some one has said, "It is better to build a fence at the top of a precipice than to provide ambulances at the bottom." The Salvation Army is called upon to do both. The ambulance for broken humanity, but the fence for the little ones who in very many cases have been greatly sinned against, and in other cases are the children of unmarried mothers. Others also are orphans who, but for the Salvation Army would be facing life alone. In Canada we have Children's Homes in Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Halifax, London, Hamilton, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Brandon, Calgary and Vancouver. Will you help? Obituary.

Bertha M. Bristol, widow of the late J. B. Aylesworth, Newburgh, died at Newburgh on Sunday morning. In January Mrs. Aylesworth came to Napanee to nurse her mother, Mrs. P. Bristol, and remained with Mrs. Bristol until Saturday evening, when she returned to Newburgh. She had been in poor health for about a month, but was apparently better when she returned home. An attack of heart failure was the cause of death. Besides her aged mother she leaves two brothers, Messrs. Roswell Bristol, Bath, and Harry Bristol, Napanee, also two nieces Mrs. F. Sharpe, Violet, and Mrs. Robt. Hamm, Odessa. The remains were brought to Napanee, where the funeral took place from Mrs. Bristol's residence this (Tuesday) afternoon, at 1 p.m., to Morven cemetery.

Rev. W. R. Tanton.

The following is an extract from a letter of the Saskatchewan Staff correspondent in The Christian Guardian of April 18th, 1923:—Saskatchewan friends are glad to see the announcement in the Guardian of the renewed call to Rev. W. R. Tanton, formerly of North Battleford, to Trinity Church, Napanee. We are not particularly anxious to get into what is evidently a controversial question, but there was one aspect to this matter that we could not see last year and cannot see this one either. That is, if ministers come to western churches over the heads of men brought up in those Conferences, why should not a western man go east on the same terms? Is not sauce for the goose also for the gander? West and east stuff apart, we believe that Mr. Tanton is of the calibre that cannot be kept back.

Grace Church Services.

During the past week Dr. Hanley and Mr. Fisher have preached and sung to very large and appreciative audiences each night. The mid-day meeting at Gibbard's factory was well attended and a deep sense of interest and appreciation shown by the men. Although both subject and music at each meeting is of a very high order, special mention might be made of the "Young People's Night" on Friday evening. At this time the teen age boys and girls occupied the whole centre section of the auditorium and the splendid sermon should undoubtedly bear good fruit in the lives of our young people. On Saturday night, "Children's Night," the attendance was large and great credit was reflected on Mr. Fisher for his excellent training of the little ones. Sunday morning's service was inspiring, many elderly people and "shut-ins" enjoyed it to the full. The meeting for married people on Sunday at 3 p.m., drew a large audience and a number of young married people indicated their desire to make God the corner stone in their homes. A deep spiritual feeling was manifested at the Sunday evening service, at which time the church was packed to the doors and many were unable to get inside. Surely great good will result from such a wonderful series of meetings.

Glad She Took Friend's Advice

Mrs. Hartley States Tanlac, Taken On Mrs. Braithwaite's Recommendation, Restored Her Fully.

"It certainly is remarkable how quickly Tanlac restores a person's health. When I had taken my second bottle, my indigestion was gone and I gained eleven pounds. No home should be without Tanlac." This statement was made the other day by Mrs. Alma Hartley, 13 Bright St., Toronto, Ont.

"Stomach trouble, sleeplessness and a badly run-down condition kept me in misery two years and I was just a nervous wreck. When I look back now I wonder how I lived on the little I ate, my appetite was so poor. My food soured, gas bloated me and caused terrible pains, and I was dreadfully nauseated. I almost forgot what a good night's sleep was, and became alarmingly thin and weak.

"It was Mrs. Braithwaite, my neighbor, who advised me to try Tanlac treatment, and I am surely thankful. My appetite is so ravenous now I can't wait for meal time. My nerves are calm, I sleep like a child and always feel strong and refreshed. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 35-million bottles sold.

TRIUMPH FOR FOOTBALL.

Modern Sport Is Replacing Bull-Fighting in Spain.

MADRID, April 23.—The sport of Spain is changing. The change was strikingly shown recently, when two teams of Spaniards struggled over a football instead of with a bull.

For years it has been known that Queen Victoria, when she had to attend a bull fight officially, looked on through smoked glasses. Her presence at the football game, which took the place of the traditional bull fight at the Seville Fair, undoubtedly strengthened the trend of opinion which is gradually replacing ancient sport with modern, and ousting bull-fighting from its once popular place.

The queen entered the fair at the head of a cavalcade of 50 of the most beautiful women in Spain, all mounted on ponies, and wearing gaily colored dresses and broad-brimmed Andalusian sombreros. The cavalcade, which also included the queen's children, created great enthusiasm among the crowd, where everyone, even foreigners, wore Spanish costumes. The queen's ladies were pelted with flowers all along the route.

During their journey the king and queen often stopped to drink the wines lavishly offered them at the booths. The scene of color and gaiety was delightful and enchanting. Among the prominent visitors was Guglielmo Marconi, who, in offering his respects to the king, expressed delight at a spectacle revealing under such charming conditions the aristocracy of Spain.

WAS ATTACKED BY MOB

Montreal Street Car Conductor Narrowly Escaped Lynching.

He Was in Charge of Car That Ran Down and Killed a Little Boy.—The Angry Crowd Threatened His Life and Passengers Had to Protect Him.—Almost a Double Tragedy.

MONTREAL, April 23.—Frenzied with horror at the sight of the unendurable sufferings of a boy of two and a half years, Haimie Dinnerman, who had fallen across the car lines on St. Lawrence boulevard Sunday night as a speeding car rushed upon him, and who lay under the car with his leg almost severed at the hip, a large crowd which had gathered at the spot of the tragedy made repeated efforts to lynch the conductor of the car.

Shouting threats and imprecations, men in the crowd hurled themselves time after time on the car, and only the courage of its occupants, who formed themselves into a solid phalanx to resist the capture of the car, in all probability saved the conductor's life, at the risk of being beaten to death he succeeded at last in rushing over the road into a nearby restaurant, the proprietor of which at once locked his doors and notified the police.

The crowd, which by now was many hundreds strong, besieged the restaurant, and might have effected an entrance, but the arrival of a strong squad of police, who used their batons freely, saved the situation. The conductor was got into the car again, and rushed it from the scene of what had nearly been a double tragedy.

At the time of the accident it was found impossible to release the victim from beneath the wheels, and it was necessary to wait until the car could be jacked up. The child was rushed to a hospital, but died before it was reached, having bled almost to death before he could be rescued.

The conductor suffered a bruised nose and had his clothes almost torn from his body in the melee.

WOMAN DIED IN WOODS.

Had Become Despondent Over Her Ill Health.

CHATHAM, Ont., April 23.—The mystery regarding the disappearance of Miss Annie Stonehouse, the aged Wallaceburg woman who had been missing since the first of March, was cleared up Saturday morning, when two schools boys on a tramp through the country ran across the body of the woman in a bush on the farm of Perry Dolsen, of the River Road, Raleigh.

Miss Stonehouse, who was 61 years of age, and who had been in poor health for some months, disappeared from the Public General Hospital of this city, and since then the authorities and the members of her family have been conducting a thorough search for her. A bottle which evidently had contained carbolic acid was found near the body, which leads to the belief that the woman, while temporarily deranged, took her own life. An inquest will be held. Deceased's purse, containing a sum of money, was found near the body. The remains have been taken to Wallaceburg for burial.

Crossing Again Takes Toll.

BRANTFORD, April 23. — The deadly level crossing took further toll here on Saturday, when, in the General Hospital, little Arthur Dawson of Alpine Avenue, Hamilton, died, following injuries received when a car from Hamilton was struck by a Grand Trunk train Saturday afternoon. The crossing was the one at the former tollgate on the Paris road, four miles from the city, a point where the railway runs through cuttings, necessitating a dip in the road at the place. As a result it is impossible to see if the tracks are clear until a car is practically on the crossing itself.

There were five in the party, Thomas Evans and Herbert Laughton being seriously injured, though they were to-day reported to be doing well at the hospital, while a man and a woman in the car escaped with minor injuries.

The spot is notoriously bad, a fatality having been reported last year, while there have been innumerable accidents that did not result in death.

Under the Highway Department plans the crossing was to be abolished this year. It is not certain that this will be done, however, as the county of Brant is opposing construction of the road.

De Valera Plans Escape.

LONDON, April 23.—Eamonn de Valera arrived secretly in Dublin several days ago and is now planning to escape to America, according to a despatch to-night from the Dublin correspondent of the Sunday Times.

After commenting on the fact that he has not been harmed when so many of the most important Republican leaders, and his close associates have been captured, the correspondent suggests the Free State is not very anxious to find him, and might welcome his escape to the United States.

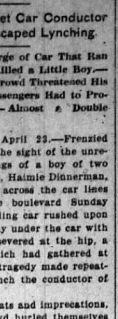
GILLETT'S LYE



Comparatively few people realize to what extent Gillett's Lye can be used to advantage in every home. For instance, with one can of Gillett's Lye and five and a half pounds of lard or grease, ten pounds of good hard soap can be made. Use one tablespoon Gillett's Lye in gallon of water for cleaning and disinfecting refrigerators, sinks, garbage cans, tiled floors, baths and toilets.

Useful for over 500 purposes.

FLOOD IS ABATING.

Situation Improved in Portage la Prairie and Brandon.

WINNIPEG, April 23.—Although the reports from Brandon did not sustain the hope that the flood there had reached its peak, improvement was reported from Portage la Prairie, half-way between Winnipeg and Brandon. Taken generally, the indications Sunday were that there will be a gradual recession of the Assiniboine River and its tributaries, which for days have inundated the low-lying land of Central Manitoba, driving several hundred people from their homes, and causing extensive property damage.

The river is still running high at Portage la Prairie, where residents were compelled to leave their homes on Saturday morning, when the banks of the Assiniboine gave way west of the city, and flooded the west-end of the city and railway yards. The water has receded fourteen inches, and the blasting of an ice jam east of the city, it is believed, will afford great relief and completely save the situation.

The waters at Brandon receded 12 inches, but now show an inclination to "come back" and eclipse former records. They rose in the early hours of the day about nine inches and afterwards remained more or less stationary.

CALLED TO ENGLISH BAR.

How James M. Beck is First U. S. Citizen So Honored.

LONDON, April 23.—James M. Beck, Solicitor-General of the United States, is likely to be called to the English Bar by one of the four Inns of the court here, according to Lord Riddell's usually well-informed News of the World.

If this is true, Mr. Beck will be the first United States law officer to become a member of the English Bar since the American Revolution. According to the News of the World, this action will be taken because the American Government wants the solicitor-general to represent it in a case before the judicial council of the Privy Council—an appeal from Canada in which the United States is involved.

Judah P. Benjamin, who was a member of Jeff Davis Cabinet, went to England after the surrender of Gen. Lee and after a few months' study was made a member of the British Bar. He, of course, was not a United States official.

Girl Sends Seven to Death.

MOSCOW, April 23.—A bobbed-haired young woman in her early twenties sat as presiding judge at a trial in the Moscow District Court Saturday, and in a calm voice sentenced seven men to death for robbery with violence. She was Citizeness Anna Glusmann, formerly of Kharkov, who several months ago attracted the attention of the Commissariat of Justice by her shrewd decisions in the Ukranian courts that she was invited to Moscow, and became a member of the Presidium of the Moscow District Court.

The defendants were a gang of highway robbers, all young, who carried out armed robberies in clothing factories last March. They admitted their guilt.

Four Flyers Perish.

DAYTON, O., April 23.—Four flyers were almost instantly killed, and two others probably fatally injured at 12.30 p.m. Saturday, when a Martin air service bomber which was leaving the McCook Field here for Rantoul, Ill., fell into the Great Miami River here. One commissioned officer, Captain Lawson, and five enlisted men were in the plane. Captain Lawson and Sergt. Biddle were among the dead taken from the river.

The ship had just taken off from McCook Field. When a few hundred feet in the air the pilot saw he would be unable to clear the Herman Avenue Bridge, which adjoins McCook Field, and swerved his machine to avoid crashing into the bridge. The plane turned over in the air and fell into the river.

Molly Ellis Rescued.

The girl, who was kidnapped recently by tribesmen, is reported to be safe in charge of Mrs. Starr, a woman physician, at Khankibasar, in the Tirah country. Though weak and somewhat bruised, the girl is said to be well.

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, April 23.—The butcher cattle trade at the Union Stock Yards last week was a little better than expected, with prices generally a shade higher. At the close killers were about 25c. to one hundred lower than previous week's close. There was also a good trade in export cattle at steady prices. A sharp recovery was shown in calf prices under lighter receipts, while sheep and lambs held about steady. An early decline in the hog market was recovered under the close of the week.

Exporters paid from $7.50 to $8.25 for heavy steers. Choice cattle of export quality sold in small lots from $7.50 to $8 a hundred. A shortage of shipping space is restricting the trading in export cattle at the present time, as there is a good demand from Great Britain for cattle.

An odd lot of choice butcher steers brought $7.60 a hundred, while most of the best sold at the close from $7 to $7.50 a hundred.

Receipts of calves were nearly 1,000 head under those of the previous week, and prices made a sharp recovery. Choice calves sold during the previous period at $9 a hundred were bringing from $11 to $12 this week.

The offering of spring lambs was heavier last week, with sales being made from $6 to $15 each. Light sheep were generally steady from $1 to $9 a hundred.

Despite a heavier offering of hogs, prices closed at the close of the week unchanged from $11.00 to $11.25 on a graded basis.

Receipts of live stock last night for to-day's market were: Cars, 29; cattle, 1,484; calves, 579; hogs, 3,397; sheep, 256.

Strange Accident Fatal.

LONDON, Ont., April 23.—Archie Irwin, aged 21, was fatally hurt this morning while working at the stables of A. Stinchcombe, Rectory Street. Irwin, who came from the west recently, had been working for the past two weeks for Stinchcombe as a teamster. This morning while two other men held the horse, he stood on a box and attempted to singe the horses' throat. The horse reared and struck him off the box. His head struck the cement floor and he suffered a concussion of the brain from which he did not rally. His death occurred at Stinchcombe's home this afternoon. Coroner R. Fersuson conducted an inquiry and deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Desperadoes Break Prison.

MARINETTE, Mich., April 23.—Blasts of a giant siren were sounded at ten-minute intervals to warn the countryside of the escape of two desperate criminals from State prison here, Saturday night.

The men, Russell Smith and Smith Madja, used a heavy crow bar to smash a padlock that held a steel door of the tunnel connecting the new cell block with the old one. Once inside the tunnel they pounded a hole through the shinsle roof and made their escape that way.

Madja is what is known as a "double lifer." It is his second escape. Smith is serving a 40 to 80-year term for robbery while armed.

"I suppose for the people on the inside," said Mr. Cullen, "a mining proposition is just as safe and businesslike as anything else. 'The trouble comes in knowing when a mine's a mine, and when it's a swindle, and I guess you have to be a metallurgical shark to know that anyway. But the way things have been going for the last year or two, with all this speculation in the metals, and all the fortunes that have been made, sort of set me to thinking that with good advice, you—"

"Now You Just Wait a Second."

"I beg your pardon," said Hilliard quickly. "There's been mighty little speculation in metals, Mr. Cullen; but there's been a tremendous amount of speculation in stock. The difference between West and East; the difference between insider and outsider; the difference between the capitalist and the gambler is this—the East, the outsider and the gambler buy stock; the West, the insider and the capitalist buy mines. Buy them outright and develop them first and exploit them afterward. If they're good, the West keeps them to itself and pockets the profits; if they're shaky, the West sells stocks to the East, and gets its profit that way, and calmly steps out from under. The art and science of underwriting . . ."

"Now you just wait a second," interrupted Angela, who had been fidgeting and playing with her wrist watch. "Dad—Mr. Hilliard! This is awfully interesting, but dinner's in just a few minutes, and—"

"Plenty of time," said Cullen, waving her off. "Plenty of time! Go ahead, Mr. Hilliard. This is too good to miss. Smoke a cigarette for an appetizer?"

"Thank you," Hilliard, having decided to take complete advantage of the present opportunity, marshaled salient details as he held a match for his host. "Well, perhaps I can show you best by an actual example. I'm out of the game entirely, as I said, but I was invited a day or two ago to join a New York syndicate in financing a property I appraised myself in 1914. It's owned at present by four boys with a shoe-string apiece. They can't finance it themselves, so they need help, and they've come to Wall Street and whispered their secret through a megaphone. Now suppose, just to make it clear all around, that you and I and Angela are to form a syndicate to underwrite the company." He was sustained by the reflection that even though he came in the guise of a mountebank, there was nothing dishonorable about the wares he had brought to sell.

"Ooh!" said Angela, joyously, "Thanks!"

Simultaneously her father gave her a little frown of affectionate remonstrance, and Hilliard gave her a little sample of affectionate esteem.

"Now, the boys who own it," said Hilliard, "are in such straits that we can practically dictate our own terms. I don't mean to imply that we'd take too great an advantage of them, but it's a plain case of supply and demand, and we're naturally interested in a bargain. We go over the mine very carefully, and find that although it isn't actually producing any copper just yet, because the owners ran out of money before they could get that far, it has enough ore reserves to guarantee at least ten thousand tons a year for twenty years, provided the necessary equipment is bought and put into operation. That tonnage, with the price of copper where it is now—around thirty cents—and the cost of production what it is now, and other factors what they are now would eventually mean a net profit of about a quarter of a million dollars a year. So first we have these present owners organize a corporation, capitalized at two million dollars."

Cullen smoked violently, and looked puzzled.

"You're getting out of my depth. How do you arrive at that?"

"That's so as to insure ten per cent dividends. And the mine can pay ten per cent, provided we can arrange to get the capital. You see, Mr. Cullen, a copper mine isn't like a factory, and you can't figure it the same way, because a factory runs on indefinitely, and if you simply replace the machinery whenever it wears out, there's nothing to prevent the same plant from keeping on making the same sort of product for a hundred years. But every pound of ore you take out of a mine leaves that much less for the future, and eventually your ore's going to be all gone. And if this particular mine is going to be exhausted in about twenty years, it stands to reason that it's being exhausted at the rate of one-twentieth, or five per cent, a year. You must take that always into consideration. And therefore, every stockholder is entitled to get back at least five per cent of his money each year to cover that depreciation, in addition to whatever he might to get for ordinary profits, which is another five per cent. Otherwise—"

"Oh! I see!" cried Angela.

"Prove it!" commanded Hilliard indulgently.

"Why, if the company just paid five per cent for twenty years, and at the end of it, your ore was all gone, the people would only just have got their money back, and they wouldn't have made any real profit at all!"

"Exactly!" said Hilliard. "So the company must pay at least ten per cent—half for bona fide dividends and half for depreciation."

"Oho!" said Cullen, opening his eyes. "Is that why the big mining companies pay such big dividends? I thought it was all clear profit!"

"No, sir. The dividends of a mining company have to be very high to be attractive at all; they have to make good that depreciation. Well, we make the boys incorporate, as I said, for two million dollars, on which we can pay ten per cent. I'll show you what the setup looks like." He wrote on the back of an old envelope: Capitalization $2,000,000 — 200,000 shares at $10 each.

"Now, the company (and you must remember that so far we haven't any official connection with it), agrees to take over the property, and pay the present owners for it with 80,000 shares of stock, and it also agrees to sell to you and Angela and me the other 120,000 shares at a dollar apiece or $120,000, of which we agree to pay half in cash, and the balance in about ninety days.

"Now then, we own 120,000 shares for which we've paid, and agreed to pay $120,000. That is, we've underwritten these shares for a dollar apiece, and paid down half the amount. Now let's begin to look at it from the public's standpoint. Here's a mine with plenty of ore; and a company with cash enough on hand to begin producing at a profit very soon—although nobody pretends that it's actually producing now. It has $80,000 in the bank, and we must hew out its ore in ninety days. It can go ahead and contract for machinery and workmen, and it does, and you and Angela and I are still letting the former owners manage it, but since we're in control of the stock, we can elect ourselves as directors, or elect other people whose names carry weight with the public, so that we can always direct the general policy, and see that it's careful and conservative. From every angle, then, financial and moral, the venture looks like a big success. So you and Angela and I go to a good broker, or to a group of brokers, and make them a proposition. We convince them of its value as we have; we let them send their own engineers out to make a report, and as evidence of good faith, we pay all their expenses; we let them go over our books. Everything's fair and square and above board. And we agree that these brokers will take some of this stock off our hands to sell to the public (because they've got a selling organization already established, and plenty of customers who look to them for advice) and it's agreed that they'll pay us—say, four dollars a share for what they think they can sell. The brokers then do some advertising, send out their circulars and bulletins and pamphlets to their customers, and sell that stock to the public for anywhere from six to eight dollars a share. That is, the public is glad enough, when the prospect's a good one, to pay seven or eight dollars (because the share's going to be worth ten) for what cost the broker four dollars, and cost us one dollar—which we've already got back from the brokers, and we've still got the half of those 120,000 shares of ours left besides! So here's the final balance sheet!" He hastily totaled the list, and handed it over to Cullen.

Capitalization $2,000,000—200,000 shares at $10.
Stock paid to individual owners	80,000 shares
Stock sold to syndicate for $120,000	120,000 shares
Total	200,000 shares
We got in return for our 120,000 shares
We got brokers	20,000 shares
Leaving	90,000 shares
We give brokers a two year option at $5 apiece on	20,000 shares
Leaving	70,000 shares
We pay lawyers, experts etc.	10,000 shares
Leaving	60,000 shares

"And that balance of 60,000 shares," he said, "belongs to us three. The syndicate's about half formed. Nothing final, but it's pending. And it is good—so good that I doubt if any layman could break into it with a cold chisel." Annis, he excused himself on the ground of salesman's license. "But that's the fundamental, Mr. Cullen—that's how the thing is done, and that's how the public carries the whole business of financing, and doesn't know it."

He assumed an attitude of easy unconcern. Angela, her breath coming rapidly, was regarding him with awe-struck eyes. Mr. Cullen, his mouth drawn to a perfectly straight line, was gazing spellbound at the orderly array of figures on the envelope.

"And this—is a genuine mine?" he managed presently.

"In my opinion, it's a very wonderful prospect," said Hilliard, and he believed every word of that solemn statement.

Mr. Cullen folded the envelope, and then suddenly, as though too cautious to betray his profound absorption (which he had been betraying frankly for at least twenty minutes), tossed it back to Hilliard.

"When you've got a syndicate that'll let me in for say, thirty cents," he said, with elaborate humor, "just pass along the good word, will you?"

"I never try to do business with my friends," said Hilliard, with the most delicate touch of reproof.

"A good principle, too, but—" Mr. Cullen glanced at his watch. "It's dinner time, and more too. We'd better get along up to the house, or the first thing you know, we'll have servant troubles in our midst. And you didn't bring up that subject anyway—I brought it up." He took Angela's arm paternally. "Just as a matter of fact," he said, clearing his throat. "As a matter of fact, Mr. Hilliard—where about did you say this property is located?"

* * * * * * *

Shortly after dinner Angela, who had fled to the telephone in answer to a peremptory summons, came back complaining.

"Dinner at the Durant's on Sunday," she announced. "All three of us. Very quiet, Carol said. So I accepted—and that means you've got to stay with us two days more anyway, Mr. Hilliard. Do you mind very much?"

"Mind!" Hilliard had risen half out of his chair. His tremendous yearning to see Carol again, and his violent reaction at the prospect, had greatly influenced his voice, which was strident, explosive. The Cullens were laughing aloud at his confusion.

"He's blushing!" crowed Angela. "Look at him! Look at him!"

Indeed, he was crimson to the temples. Sunday—forty-eight hours! How he had spurned her!—and how he had suffered from that moment until now! To see her again . . . merely to see her! Business was business, and the farce must go on; no matter what else happened he must hew out his success; he had ceased to love her, and he had come prepared for guerilla warfare . . . but to see her again! To hear her voice! To watch that smile of hers, and remember the tears she had shed for Dicky Morgan!

Sunday—forty-eight hours!

The Cullens were still laughing at him, and in Angela's soprano there was a note of feminine resentment, but Hilliard's ears were suddenly stone deaf.

Cullen Had Swallowed the Bait Whole.

CHAPTER VII.

Since Friday night, Hilliard had lived only for Sunday; his whole existence had been turned to Sunday, and when at last the morning arrived, his greatest fear was that he might not live until dinner-time.

On reaching Carol's side, he was both awkward and incoherent; and he failed to derive encouragement from the realization which gradually stole over him, that the Durnuts had asked a number of other guests to dinner. Armstrong was waiting patiently in the aisle, and keeping closer to Carol than Hilliard liked, and there was also a bright-faced boy of nineteen or twenty who had promptly attached himself to Angela—his name was Waring, and he was the grandson of the patriarch-al clergyman, with the head of Moses and the spirit of youth, who presently came down to join the little group, and complete it. So that altogether there were nine people who finally sat down to table; and Hilliard's dream of quiet progress and harbored conversation was shattered in a twinkling.

It was all very homelike, and all very friendly, but to Hilliard, sitting there between Carol and her mother, the occasion was peculiarly acute. He had long since discarded any notion of his active fears; he was confident in his disguise to the point of recklessness, for he had covered the windings of the trail by an infinite variety of methods; and yet the having any tangible facts to grasp, he was subtly warned to remain on sentry duty ever his lips.

He was gratified that the conversation, after one fintural enough eddy, was whirled away from the vicissitudes of Dicky Morgan, for he had talked his fill on that particular subject. For a time, he amused himself by watching Angela and Waring playing their world-old game across the table; after that, he paid a little polite attention to Mrs. Durant, and to the clergyman; and then snatching an opportunity unlooked for, he gave his kindest smile to Carol, and for an instant took the monopoly from Armstrong. And he had hardly looked down once into her October-brown eyes before the mystery of his restlessness was as clear as crystal, and Hilliard was thoroughly dumfounded, and confused.

He had come upon him, a quarter of an hour ago, and they exchanged their first superficial sentences, that he was lonelier than he had ever imagined, but he hadn't realized, until this immediate contingency, that this sensation had carried over until now. He was prevented by the very limits of the project which had brought him here, from relensing any of his sincere thoughts; he hadn't comprehended, until he had learned the truth just now by actual experience, that loneliness is nothing but an aggravated state of self-repression. Never in all his life, not even when he had lain for months in hospital in France, had he been as lonely as today, and at this moment, when he was surrounded by people he knew intimately, and when he was enjoined from sharing in their community of mind.

Carol, looking up at him with what wasn't exactly a smile, but was at least a cousin to it—that well-remembered flash of sympathetic interest—Carol spoke to him under cover of the general conversation.

"A penny for your thoughts!" she proffered.

"They aren't worth it," said Hilliard. "I was thinking about myself." He continued to regard her steadily, and he was alarmed to discover that he was losing one of the abilities which had made him so sure of himself. He continued to hold that she had treated him shabbily, mercilessly; but notwithstanding that, as he gazed at her, and perceived the sweet naturalness which was developing out of last week's shock, he was secretly perturbed. In spite of himself, he began to see, as though by camera obscura, dim visions of the past; he was righteously annoyed that they should rise to torment him, and still the visions came.

"But after all that you've been through," she said, "I should think your thoughts about yourself would be extremely interesting."

"I'm afraid they're rather gloomy, Miss Durant, whenever they touch on what I've been through. And when anything like this gathering here today builds up a comparison. . . . I'm sorry, but I can't always master it."

"You mean the difference between a family over here and a family over there?"

"Exactly," he said. "Down to the last detail—what we eat, and where we live, and what we talk about, and what we think about—everything."

"I've thought of that, too," she said soberly. "But I'll have to confess that it wasn't until you came—it wasn't until after that first night at Angela's—that the great difference came home to me. It's made me feel that it's almost wrong—almost unendurable—that we should be so warm and comfortable, and well-fed, when over on the continent . . . well, I wonder whether we won't have to pay for this some time?"

It was at this juncture that Mrs. Durant rose; and Hilliard, with keen foresight, calmly offered Carol after her mother into the living room, made for a familiar piece of furniture and pre-empted it; it would seat two people, and no more—there wasn't the slightest use in Armstrong's joining so disconsolately in the neighborhood; it had a maximum capacity of two. Furthermore, it was removed by several feet from the nearest listening post.

He was so close to her that their sleeves touched; he looked into the beautiful eyes which were so clear, so unsuspecting; and his will swayed perilously. Had he prepared so long and savagely for his requital, only to lose his impetus at almost the first glance of those brown eyes? Was he reflected that there was nothing to prevent him from being a good salesman and from renewing his predilection for Carol at the same time. The idea of courting her again, in his false character, was highly dramatic.

"I know you won't misunderstand me," he said, his heart shaking. "and I hope that you won't consider it too presumptuous—but—the other day you spoke of Dicky Morgan as a very dear friend of yours. Miss Durant, I want to do everything in the world I can for you, and he was my dear friend as well as yours. I'm not disloyal to him, or to you, or to myself—but I should like more than I can ever tell you to feel that I had done my utmost to take his place. No one can do that literally—I am not so vain—but I feel, and I have felt from the time we met each other, Dicky would have wanted us to be friends."

He Was So Close to Her That Their Sleeves Touched.

"That's—that's wonderfully thoughtful of you," said Carol, softly. "And . . . and I think he would have wanted that. . . . If he'd known. . . ." Her eyes were suspiciously dim and Hilliard's loneliness dissolved into a great spasm of longing which held him and shook him and left him weak with impotence.

"Then I'll stay in Syracuse," he said abruptly. "Provided—provided you won't be offended if I do have to want to know you for yourself—just a little selfishly. I'm afraid that isn't very clear—it's difficult to separate it—but you see—"

"Don't try to explain," she said, subdued. "I know how hard all this must be for you—and I think perhaps you need my friendship as much as I need yours."

Before he could reply, there was a flutter of indescribable gracefulness before them. Angela was courtesying in mock obeisance to the floor. Behind her, Waring was watching her possessively.

"If your majesties will wake up half a second," she said, "everybody's going to walk up around the Sedgwick farm tract to get some fresh air. Coming?"

As they stood together, drenched with regret for the confidences that might forever remain unsaid, a maid appeared in the doorway.

"Please, ma'am," she said breathlessly, "it's the Western Union—for Mr. Hilliard!"

"Right in my study," called the doctor, hurrying. "Just across the hall. There you are!" and ushered him into the sanctum and considerately closed the door.

Dungeon Full of Money.

Storage for a portion of the enormous surplus of silver coinage has been found in the dungeon beneath the Wakefield Tower of the Tower of London. Other dungeons will probably be put to the same use.

No safer deposit in the world than the Wakefield Tower could possibly be found. An armed guard of the Coldstream Guards is always on duty there.

The silver hoard is inspected at frequent intervals by officials of the Royal Mint, who are guarded throughout the proceedings by armed police and Beefeaters, while watch is kept outside by the garrison main guard.

The Wakefield Tower itself contains wealth estimated at hundreds of millions. The famous jewel house is located in the Tower, and there are in addition to the crown jewels, including the Star of Africa, cut from the famous Cullinan diamond other precious stones.

The dungeon beneath, where the hoard of unwanted silver reposes, is below the level of the river. It held its quota of prisoners when the history of the Tower of London was in the making.

Bird That Cannot Fly.

Probably the rarest creature known to man is the notornis, a variety of bird which is unable to fly.

Only four specimens of this flightless bird have ever been secured, all of them during the last century, and it was thought that it had completely died out.

Quite recently, however, a notornis was seen and photographed in England, and students of natural history are excited over its sudden reappearance.

The notornis originally inhabited New Zealand. The best-known kind have green plumage on the back, with the head, neck and under parts purple. It has wings, but they are so small that flight is an impossibility. The notornis is a swift runner, like other flightless birds such as the ostrich.

It is twenty-five years since a living specimen was caught.

The Largest Bells.

While it is probably true that the largest perfect bell in the world is to be found at Mingoon, about nine miles above Mandalay, in Burma, its massive structure weighing some eighty tons, and its measurements being about eighteen feet in diameter and thirty-one feet in height, it must not be forgotten that in the Kremlin, in Moscow, there is a much larger one, though unfortunately it is badly broken. It is called the "Tsar Kolokol," and weighs about 193 tons. This huge example of the founder's art has a piece broken out of one side of such size that the bell at one time was used as a chapel, with the aperture missing serving as a doorway. Regarding the Mingoon bell, it is interesting to remember that for generations it remained half-buried in the ground, but just before the World War it was examined by order of Lord Curzon, found to be intact, and hung in a handsome belfry. It is so finely tempered that a mere rap of the knuckle is sufficient to bring out therefrom a strangely thrilling low note.

"PASS KEYS, ALL'S WELL"

Ceremony Connected With Closing of the Tower of London.

Should you, on a winter's night, wander in the direction of Tower Hill, in Old London, and pass the gloomy walls of Britain's greatest state prison, you may suddenly hear the words, "God save King George," echo through the frosty atmosphere.

It may seem to you as if the clockwork of time had suddenly run back several generations.

Within the walls of the Tower of London are carried out ceremonies which date back to days when London was a very different city.

Sharp at eleven o'clock at night the outer gates of the Tower are closed. After then nobody can pass the guard without giving the countersign. This word, changed every day, is sometimes forgotten by one or other of those quartered in the Tower. The rule is the same for everyone, and they have to sleep outside.

At the same hour a warder, accompanied by two "Beefeaters," locks up the inner gates and carries the keys to the house of the major of the Tower, in whose bedroom they remain overnight. As this small procession, trailing along towards the major's quarters it passes the guard at the main gate.

Suddenly the ancient walls reecho with the challenge, "Halt! Who goes there?" The warder halts with the reply, "Keys."

"Whose keys?" shouts the sentry. The words "King George's keys," come out of the darkness.

At once the sentry, satisfied that all is in order, proclaims, "Pass keys, all's well." The guard turns out, presents arms, and shouts with one voice, "God save King George."

Paying military compliments to inanimate things, such as keys, may seem absurd to some modern thinkers. It must be remembered, however, that the compliment is paid, not to the keys themselves, but to what they represent.

Once the keys of the Tower are deposited in the major's room the inner gates of the stronghold are never under any pretext, opened until the morning.

In one sense, indeed, the Tower is the kernel of the British Empire. For therein lie the Crown Jewels, the outward and visible sign of the Monarchy dear to the heart of British people.

Old Friend Forgotten.

Fascisti are always very particular that on every possible occasion their song "Giovinezza," should be played after the National Anthem. But their request is not always favorably met. During the gala performance given at the Scala Theater in Milan, which was attended by the Principe of Udine, the Fascisti at the end of the first act demanded that "Giovinezza" should be played by the orchestra. Signor Toscanini refused to comply with the request, saying that the orchestra was not prepared to play the Fascisti song. Whereupon the Fascisti insulted Signor Toscanini, threatening to chastize him for his disobedience. Toscanini as a protest, left the hall, while an enterprising Fascisti played the song on the piano. The day after Signor Toscanini sent in his resignation as conductor of the largest theater in Italy, which, however, he withdrew at the insistent appeal of his friends. The Fascisti seemed to have forgotten that Signor Toscanini was among the first Italians to join the Fascisti association when it was formed three years ago, and that he was also a candidate in the Fascisti list during the political elections of 1919.

WHERE LITTLE PIGS GO

Too Many Young Pigs Are Eaten by Their Mothers.

How Bill Smith Overcame the Trouble—Give the Sow a Balanced Ration—Just Practice Intelligent Feeding—Rationing the Sow.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Tom was "blue." Having just returned from the swine-pen, where he had gone to inspect a new litter of pigs, he found that five had disappeared. The unnatural mother had eaten them. "The pig must be a strange animal," he reflected. "It must have been pure 'cussedness' that caused her to eat her offspring. She was well fed, too, on corn and wheat shorts; hunger could not be at the bottom of this infanticidal case."

Tom went about his work mumbling to himself as to what could be the matter. Nearly fifty little pigs had been lost by such cannibalism during the two preceding years.

Find Out the Weak Spot.

"Where is the weak spot in my system of feeding swine, anyway," he questioned himself. "I will go over and see Bill Smith, the most successful pig man in the district, and see if he can clear up this pig-eating business that is causing me so much loss."

"Good morning, Tom. What makes your face look so long and your nose so blue this morning," quoth Smith, as he looked at his visitor's glum countenance.

"I have had another experience with a pig-eating sow," said Tom. "Five more pigs gone this morning, and I can't make it out. The sow was liberally fed on corn and shorts. I want to get at the bottom of this trouble, so I have come over to ask you your experience, as I suppose you have had losses the same as I have."

How Smith Overcame the Trouble.

"Well, Tom, I would be glad to give you my experience in this some tough luck. I used to lose a lot of pigs in this same way up to about two years ago, when I suddenly tumbled to what the cause of it all was, and applied a remedy that has proven a success in stopping the sows eating their young pigs."

Tom brightened up and became very much interested. "What's the secret?" he asked.

"Well, you see, it's like this: Pigs in the wild state or running in the woods usually get what their systems demand, in the variety of food supplied by the great range of living things on which the pigs feed naturally. Pigs penned up have to take what we give them, and if we neglect to supply a sufficient variety of food containing all the essentials necessary to satisfy the demands of the pig, trouble will follow. And that trouble is usually manifested in the eating of the young pigs to satisfy the craving for meat or protein food."

"That all seems reasonable enough," said Tom. "But tell me, how do you satisfy the pig's demand for meat or protein foods?"

Give the Sow a Balanced Feed.

"Simply this. Balance up the sow's feed from the start, using alfalfa hay, meat meal or digester tankage as the source of protein and phosphates. Feed alfalfa hay whatever the pigs will take. Feed tankage or meat meal, using one pound to each ten pounds of grain feed, either mixed with the grain or fed ad lib. from a self-feeder. If the sow eats her babies, Tom, it's your fault. Do as I have told you. Supply the demands of her body in the food you give her, and then she will be normal and the pigs safe."

Just Practice Intelligent Feeding.

"Thousands of young pigs are lost every spring through the neglect to feed intelligently. Nobody ever saw a slaughter-house fed sow destroy her young. Meat or protein in some form must be fed to mother pigs or there will be trouble."

"I see it, Bill, and I'll do it, too, from now on, and save the youngsters for bacon," said the new thoroughly enlightened and delighted Tom.—L. Stevenson, Secy. Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Rationing the Sow.

Rationing the sow is the surest way to forestall trouble. Overfeeding at farrowing time makes her feverish and nervous; more likely to trample her offspring and less able, often, to secrete milk properly.

Don't feed the sow at all during the twenty-four hours before farrowing, and during the week prior to that keep corn out of the ration. Corn is an especially heating feed. Instead, feed ground oats, barley or bran, any one or two of these, or all three if you like.

And don't feed the sow at all for from twelve to eighteen hours after farrowing. After that, even, go slow, taking from a week to ten days to get the animal back on full feed.

Scours in young pigs is one of the troublesome conditions which arise from faulty feeding of the mother. Next in importance to rationing comes condition of the pen. Clean, dry pens do much to prevent digestive disorders and rheumatism in both the sow and the pigs.

Warts on Horses.

Warts are very difficult to eradicate, especially situated near the mouth or eyes. The exact cause of such growths is unknown, but no doubt indicates abnormal nutrition of the affected skin. Irritation of the skin may be a contributory cause. The warts with small necks can be twisted off or hauled with a silk thread, when they will drop off. Masses of small warts will disappear in time if smothered daily with a thick paste of equal quantities of cold-pressed castor oil, salt and flowers of sulphur.

Seeking Trade-Routes.

For the purpose of proving to their own satisfaction whether or not conditions of navigation to and from Hudson Bay are such that the Hudson Bay route can be made a commercial success, a number of western interests have combined and chartered the steamship Pretorian from the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services. The vessel will sail August 1 for Hudson Bay and will proceed to Fort Churchill. Approximately 300 passengers from Western Canada will make the trip.

BARBAROUS PYGMIES.

Queer Race Has Existed In Parts of Spain.

Three feet tall—sometimes a little more, though often less—a race of barbarous natives have come to light in Spain and caught the attention of King Alfonso, who plans to take them out of their windowless mud hovels, scatter them among the normal population, and give them a chance to become civilized. As a contributor to the International Interpreter writes, their condition has been a forbidden subject until of late. We read:

Long years ago, when the present correspondent was making it his business to become acquainted with every part of the country, and as many of the people in it as possible, the manager of a bank, in discussing with him the fierce contrasts of Spain —and we were thinking then of the splendor of the new banks that were being raised in Madrid — told him that out on western borders, a shade southwest of Salamanca, nigh unto the Portuguese frontier, there was a part of Spain that was "utterly abandoned," that was unrecognized and unattended as far as possible by the state, that was "darkest Spain," most pitiful, and seemingly unredeemable by any modern Spanish Government.

This region, which he said was inhabited by people who until recently had never seen bread, lived in huts of sticks and mud, were fearfully attenuated physically, were wholly illiterate and knew nothing of newspapers, and were so much afraid of the strong, confident people from other parts that on their rare approach they, the natives, often fled, and where the full-grown boy had often not three feet of stature, is known as Las Jurdes, or sometimes it is written Las Hurdes. It is rarely marked on small maps, but is to be found on big ones due south about twenty to thirty miles from Ciudad Rodrigo, near to a range of hills called the Sierra de Gato, and largely in the valley of Las Batuecas. In the valley are a number of small hamlets or collections of huts of the kind indicated, with a hole for a door, windowless, airless, foul. Some seven thousand people live here in this way under appalling conditions of degeneracy.

When the matter was mentioned to others who it was thought might know about it, they looked coldly at the interrogator as if offended. Spain turned its back on Las Jurdes; it was ashamed of it, of its own part in its condition. Mr. Blanco Belmonte, who penetrated there and pitied so much what he saw, read a paper upon it to the Royal Geographical Society of Spain. The listeners almost wept, but nothing more happened.

Now, however, all Spain is discussing Las Jurdes—the newspapers, the Cortes, Spaniards everywhere—and, as the writer in the International Interpreter tells us:

This abandoned land, presenting a scene of infinite desolation, has even been made the subject of reports by various personages of eminence, one of whom has directed to the king what is described as an "eloquent memorial." All this is because the king himself, in a most knightly manner and upon his own initiative, set out for Las Jurdes, rode and walked through it, entered the hovels, inquired of the people, and found things out for himself.

Before he had left Las Jurdes, Don Alfonso had quite determined what was the best thing to do with it, and his conception was his own, and was in fact in opposition to that propounded by the experts in the form of reports. The king's scheme, which is virtually the national decision, is probably the best and the most efficient one. The others reported in favor of making roads, schools, installing telegraphs and telephones, and doing all sorts of standard civilization things, which in the course of time, long, long time, would perhaps bring Las Jurdes to a higher level of life.

No, said the king; it is slow and uncertain. The thing to do is to remove all these people immediately to other parts—set them to mix among others, and so raise their standard of life and their capacity in a way they could never be raised if they remain only among themselves. And when they have all been taken away to various parts, the thing to do with Las Jurdes is to burn it out completely, everything. Afterward, there will be plenty of time to consider whether any good can be made to come from that land.

This will probably be done, and soon. It is surely an extraordinary but necessary procedure. A whole race, as it were, to be moved, a whole district between twenty and thirty miles long to be burnt and destroyed.

One of the difficulties, perhaps the only one and a strange one, is that these miserable people have after all an affection for the piece of land on which they live, and do not want to leave.

ADDITIONAL ATTRACTION TO THE NIPIGON

If you could get a better buck than the one above, how far would you go to get him? The camera man got this one in the Nipigon district of Ontario, and it showed a great deal of interest in the rest of the party. Usually, however, they are not so approachable, and to get close enough to shoot is more or less of an achievement. The picture is there before remarkable for this if for no other reason.

The Nipigon has only of recent years come into its own as a hunting and fishing country, but for centuries Indians and Whites have hunted and fished along its trails, and it holds the record of being the most perfect and prolific breeding place in the world for large red and speckled trout. That Indians are said to have piled them up frozen like cordwood, and the great number taken by anglers each year are facts which warrant the belief that the supply is inexhaustible. Moose and bear are found in large numbers also, and big game in the district has increased of late years because for some reason or other the animals are driving farther south. Fishing is good any time between May and September, and exceptionally so toward the end of the season when the weather gets cooler.

Each year the Nipigon absorbs more sportsmen and many who go in search of health as much as game. Up to the present, however, the number has been confined to those who are satisfied or able to live in tents and "rough it," so the buildings this year of one of the Canadian Pacific Bungalow Camps will prove a still greater attraction. The scenery is superb and is a type all its own, for nowhere else can one find such a blending of greens and browns in foliage or such beautifully wooded waters. In later years, when its wealth of mineral ore is exploited much of this will be destroyed, but at present it stands as one of the most worth-while "visiting" countries in the world.

Have died for want of wood. .

Said a few men of renown :

To the simple folks round town.

We find it cheaper yet to burn
Our carpets and our chairs ;
It finds a job for some poor soul,
And our fuel is less than their's.

So Councilmen of Napanee.
If your reasonings none too good,
Just get your heads together
Then we'll have lots of "wood."

DEAR PEOPLE :—

How's your winter's coal hanging out ? Ours is out altogether, but we are not buying much of this charity wood. Oh, no, we have faith, and hope yet to be spared enough sense to know a good thing when we see it. We try to buy economically, and at the same time do the fair thing.

Our Saviour said, "Go Feed the Flocks," so you'll pardon us for referring to the word (feed) ; feed it means (not fleece). Now people don't be offended at our little chat ; we want to keep you from geting the (blues), and remember one thing, "don't get your feet wet." We are still here and doing fine. If we can't keep your house warm we can at least make your feet feel happy. So when you're down town drop in and get warm by our (Hot Air System).

At The Strand.

Messrs. Lindsay and Barrett, who will present the Machan Sisters' Stock Company, at the Strand for three days, commencing April 26th, have proved themselves to be capable managers. The excellent company of capable players, headed by the Machan Sisters, who will be seen in an unexcelled repertoire of the most successful comedy-dramas, enriched with scenery and effects, proves their ability as managers. As actresses, the Machan Sisters, Miss Rosalind and Miss Gloria, are versatile, have splendid voices, admirable stage presence and are ably aided by the numerous roles they are called upon to play during their visit here. Some idea of the merit of the company may be gained from the reception which has been accorded both the stars and the company wherever this attraction has appeared. Almost everywhere managers have insisted upon return engagements, and in every case where it has been granted, the Machan Sisters and their company have been greeted by capacity houses. This is not only gratifying to the young stars but it is evident that the theatre going public appreciate and enjoy the Machan Sisters Stock Company. There is every reason to believe that when this company plays here that they will be accorded the same treatment.

Allen—Weese.

A very happy wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Weese, Camden, on Wednesday, April 4th, 1923, when their youngest daughter, Ruby J., became the bride of Mr. Fraser C. Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Allen, of Newburgh. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. T. H. P. Anderson, in the presence of the members of the two families and a few intimate friends. The bride was given away by her father and was pleasingly attired in sand Canton Crepe and Paisley silk. After congratulations and the signing of the register, the company enjoyed a well prepared and daintily served wedding dinner. The happy couple took the train at Napanee for Montreal, the bride travelling in a dainty velour coat and blue hat and the groom's gift of a beautiful fur neckpiece. The community joints in best wishes to this young couple who will make their home at Newburgh and will be greatly missed by their many friends of Selby.

The Late Wilbur F. Gerow.

The tragic death of Mr. W. F. Gerow was a shock to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. His name has been intimately associated with the dairying interests of this county for a great many years. He was a pioneer in the cheese industry and as a cheese-maker had few equals in the province. He was in charge of Excelsior cheese factory for the present season and in the early morning of the 19th instant gave the alarm of fire and in a few minutes the factory was enveloped in flames. He worked most energetically to save the contents and in a measure succeeded. He was missed for a time in the flames and when found lying upon some bedding which he himself had carried from the burning building and overcome by the smoke. He was removed to a neighboring residence where he passed away in a few minutes. Mr. Gerow had the enviable reputation of being a most conscientious, good living man, who had a kind word for everybody. He will be greatly missed in the business and social circles in which he moved and particularly in the Masonic order, where he has held many important offices. The love and esteem cherished for him by his brother masons was amply testified by the beautiful floral tributes placed upon the casket and the large number who turned out to his funeral on Saturday afternoon to pay respect to his memory. The church service was conducted in Grace church, by Rev. Mr. Terrill, assisted by Rev. M. Coleman, Rev. Mr. Rogers and Rev. Mr. Wilson. This was followed by the beautiful and impressive masonic service upon the church lawn. To mourn his loss he left his widow and four sons, Frank Gerow, of Newburgh, Allan Gerow, of Tilsonburg, Donald Gerow, of Buffalo, and Grant Gerow, of Rochester.

Proof Positive

Mr. Aldige : "But madam, you will have to be identified before I can cash this check for you."

Fair Caller (blushing furiously) : "Oh, I just hate to do it, and George would be so dreadfully angry, but I have a love letter here which describes me fully, if you would care to see it."

The Eureka Electric Vacuum Cleaner

The Best Electric Vacuum Cleaner in the World.

Again the highest award is conferred upon the Eureka. From conservative England comes the latest tribute to the Eureka, when in 1922, the Royal Sanitary Institute, of London, awarded the Eureka the silver medal, the only medal and its highest award, for Vacuum Cleaners, and of course the Eureka was in competition with the world's best products of this kind.

Just as old England has behind her such strong traditions and carries so much weight in world matters, so this award carries more weight than any of the other awards yet received.

Other gold medals and highest awards conferred on the Eureka in England : Gold medal awards, Lowescroft, England, 1914 ; Gold medal awards, Brighton, England, 1920.

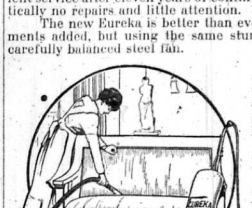
"Princess Mary bought an Eureka in January of this year."

The Eureka also won Blue Ribbons, Gold Medals and Highest Awards at world wide exhibitions : Panama Pacific Exhibition, Los Angeles Exhibition, Amsterdam Exhibition (Holland) and also in Italy.

Of course in America The Eureka is supreme leader. In 1912 alone 147,100 Eurekas were sold, 21,599 in New York City alone.

In Napanee many people have Eurekas still giving excellent service after eleven years of continuous service, with practically no repairs and little attention.

The new Eureka is better than ever, having many refinements added, but using the same sturdy, reliable motor and carefully balanced steel fan.



The Eureka is the convenient cleaner to use, and requires no adjustments for any particular kind of carpet.

In short The Eureka gets all the dirt, not the carpet.

Cleans furniture, curtains, walls, etc., as well as floors.
